Diagram is organised chronologically

The thickness of the lines is proportional to the accumulated probability

Probability at each node is indicated with numbers - 0.1 to 1

Grey boxes indicate options with probability too low to calculate

Probability of each outcome is indicated as a percentage in the orange boxes at the end

Important interim probabilities in this version

Chances Johnson is PM at 17 October European Council: 45%

Chances he is not: 53%

Chances he is in court: 2%

This route has been eliminated due to the nature of the Supreme Court judgment - prorogation can now only be used for the purpose of a new Queen's Speech. Long prorogation to waste time not possible.

A regular, short prorogation has no impact on the outcomes-

Supreme Court rules
prorogation is justiciable, and this prorogation is unlawful and is annulled

Commons sits again 24 September
onwards

Government decides to prorogue again for > 5 day period

Johnson refuses to resign

Opposition changes default in Benn Act to Revoke Article 50 in the absence of a Deal

Opposition take control of Commons Agenda, amend Benn Act to bring forward date of Art 50 extension request

Amendment fails

Amendment succeeds

Johnson complies
and sends letter

Johnson doesn't comply

Johnson resigns

"Mountfield alternative Prime Minister Route" is explained here: <http://j.mp/MountfieldRoute>

No majority for any alternative Prime Minister found

A VONC will only pass with the backing of some of the Tories that lost the whip. These MPs will probably not back Jeremy Corbyn as interim PM, and nor will they back a VONC if it leads to chaos / danger of No Deal

Corbyn will back an interim PM if it leads to the General Election that he wants

Note: there is no legal form for a "Caretaker Prime Minister" - this means a majority of MPs would back a neutral figure (not a party leader) for an interim period, with criteria to deliver a General Election or People's Vote

Number 10 has hinted that Johnson
might send the letter, but also send a further letter contradicting the first.

EU side only the extension request is binding - I do not see the EU falling for this tactic.

Court case against Johnson for non compliance with Benn Act or for refusal to resign

No idea what the hell happens here - especially if the 14 days under FTPA are still ticking

Johnson refuses everything, and does not ask for extension as Commons requested

Johnson gets a Deal that he brings back to the Commons (Deal must be different enough to allow Bercow to sanction a vote on it)

EU offers UK a 3
month extension anyway (Art 50 only requires agreement of exiting Member State), complies with Benn Act

Johnson asks for an Article 50
extension to allow the UK to hold a General Election, or Vince-Maughan
case nobile officium forces the letter to be sent

Caretaker takes UK
towards a General Election

Caretaker takes UK
towards a 2nd Referendum

Not enough time for VONC + 14 days
before Brexit

Vote of No
Confidence (VONC)
or Mountfield
Route around 21 Oct

Deal fails

Deal passes

Caretaker PM goes
to European Council 17 Oct, asks for Article 50
extension, UK
nominates a European Commissioner

Caretaker PM goes
to European Council 17 Oct, asks
for 9 month Article 50 extension, UK
nominates a European Commissioner

Last minute No Deal
versus Revoke showdown

Last minute formation of Govt with Caretaker PM, asks
EU for ext for a General Election

Government
prorogues for a Queen's Speech to waste 5 days end Oct

Brexit with a Deal (will require a technical Article 50 Extension to implement)

General Election
before end of 2019 (requires at least 3
month Article 50
Extension)

General Election
early 2020 (requires at least 6
month Article 50
Extension)

2nd Referendum sometime 2020
(requires 9 month Article 50 Extension)

No Deal 31 Oct
4%

Article 50 Revoked
UK stays in the EU
8%

-%

52%

21%

15%

Please note: a General Election could lead to No Deal. This is the chance of No Deal on 31 October only!

Combined chance of a General Election: 73%

EU will not refuse an Article 50 Extension if it is for a General Election or a People's Vote
